

Interior Water Dragons

By TY Tan

When there is an absence of exterior water, interior water forms can play an important role in activating wealth luck. If you live in condominiums, apartments or flats, the best solution is to activate small tai ji corners in the unit by having interior water forms.

Aquariums

It is good feng shui practice to have an aquarium when the water flow direction cannot be decided. Get an aquarium that is proportionate to your room and place it in the correct sectors of the living or dining room, but never inside the bedroom, toilets, kitchen, at the annual afflictions area, or at the bad water stars such as water star 2 and water star 5.

An aquarium attracts wealth into your home or business premise when it is properly maintained. The golden feng shui rule for aquariums is to keep the water clean, fresh and moving with good filtration. Since stagnant water is bad feng shui, have fish, such as goldfish, to keep the water moving. If the fish die, you must replace them.

Rolling Crystal Ball and Other Flowing Interior Water Forms

Keep these types of water forms in the correct sectors of the living or dining room, but again, never inside the bedroom, toilets and kitchen, at the annual afflictions area and at the bad water stars such as water star 2 and water star 5. The water must not flow out towards the door or a window of the house. Orientate the water flow towards the centre of the house.

No Water on Top of Mountain

Do not have a large body of water built onto your upper level of your house or golf club.

Water on top of the 'mountain' is one of the most dangerous configurations in feng shui.

Also, do not have blue-coloured roof tiles on your home or golf club establishment, as this implies water on top of the mountain and residents could lose their wealth, and your business could suffer!

The three components in water feng shui are body of water, flow of water and the water mouth. The body of water is to retain wealth, and the flow of water is to enhance income. In my next article, I will describe water mouth, which is the wealth spot.

An aquarium should have clean, fresh and moving water.

A large body of water on the upper level of a building is considered as dangerous in feng shui.
